Council conclusions on Afghanistan

FOREIGN AFFAIRS Council meeting
Luxembourg, 23 June 2014

The Council adopted the following conclusions:

"1. The European Union welcomes the second round of the presidential elections held on 14 June. The democratic transition to a new president will be a historic moment for Afghanistan. The Council pays tribute to the courage and bravery of the Afghan people, and in particular Afghan women, in their determination to have their rightful say in the election.

2. It will be vital that the will of the people is reflected. The Independent Election Commission (IEC) and the Independent Electoral Complaints Commission (IECC) must ensure that their workings are transparent, in particular the timely online publication of results from individual polling stations and the consistent application of its guidelines for the recounting and auditing of votes. It is important that both candidates act responsibly and direct any complaints through the appropriate mechanisms. Statements that prematurely claim victory or risk inflaming tensions should be avoided.

3. The EU has made an exceptional commitment to Afghanistan over the past 12 years to work with Afghans and the wider international community to support the development of a state that could better control its territory, reduce the threat posed by terrorism, address the needs and fulfil the rights of its people. Real progress has been made. But there are still considerable challenges to be overcome to help Afghanistan become a stable and functioning democracy able to offer the sort of future to its people that they want and deserve. The EU supports an Afghan-led and Afghan-owned peace and reconciliation process as a foundation for peace and stability in Afghanistan and the region.

4. The EU remains committed to Afghanistan for the long-term. Afghanistan continues to receive more than €1 billion a year in aid from the EU and Member States, making it the largest beneficiary of EU assistance in the world. This commitment is in line with the international aid pledges made at the Tokyo conference. To benefit from the full extent of those pledges requires a reciprocal and lasting commitment. The EU calls on the new Afghan authorities to take ownership and enact the political and economic reforms set out in the Tokyo Mutual Accountability Framework (TMAF).

5. The EU calls on the new president to reach out to all Afghans and neighbouring countries to invite them to contribute to the development of a stable, prosperous and fully sovereign Afghanistan, including through intensifying engagement in the Heart Of Asia process. The new president will face a number of significant challenges. Two of the most urgent challenges are security and the economy. Early conclusion of the Bilateral Security Agreement with the United States and the Status of Forces Agreement with NATO remain vital to ensuring a conducive security environment for economic growth and ongoing international support. The Council agrees in principle to an extension of EUPOL Afghanistan until the end of 2016. Urgent action to restore economic confidence, establish a platform for growth and jobs, and maximise revenue collection is imperative. The Council calls on the new president to send a clear, early signal of his commitment to ethnic and religious diversity, good governance, human rights, in particular the rights of women, and systemic action on drug trafficking and corruption.

6. The EU wants to work in close cooperation with the new government and international partners, including the UN and NATO, to maintain the progress that has been made and support and incentivise urgently needed reforms. The EU remains committed to a comprehensive approach in deepening its long-term partnership with Afghanistan. The Council calls for the early finalisation of the Cooperation Agreement for Partnership and Development (CAPD). The annexed strategy and implementation plan set out our goal of supporting the development of Afghanistan’s institutions to provide the resilience needed to safeguard progress to date and provide the platform for a more effective and ultimately sustainable Afghan state, focusing on the objectives of: promoting peace, security and regional stability; reinforcing democracy; encouraging economic and human development; and fostering the rule of law and human rights."
AFGHANISTAN: EUROPEAN UNION STRATEGY 2014-16

A. Purpose

1. The EU’s overarching strategic goal for 2014-16 will be the development of Afghanistan’s institutions to provide the resilience needed to safeguard progress to date and provide the platform for a more effective and ultimately sustainable Afghan state. This document provides a framework to better coordinate EU and Member States’ civilian engagement in Afghanistan from mid-2014 to 2016, setting out the EU’s objectives and outlining the actions and initiatives planned to achieve those objectives. The strategy is sufficiently flexible to both influence and respond appropriately to the range of potential scenarios in Afghanistan.

2. The Council stresses the importance of the related implementation plan in ensuring the coordination and coherence of EU and Member States’ actions and initiatives. The Council agrees that, at least once a year, the EU Heads of Mission will: report against progress made against each sub-objective of the Strategy; coordinate forward planning based on indicative future commitments at the level of sub-objectives; and update the list of sector initiatives and division of labour.

B. Political context

3. Afghanistan has made considerable political, security, economic and developmental progress over the past decade. But the gains made are mostly fragile and reversible. The country faces critical challenges over the coming three years to safeguard progress made and put in place the necessary reforms and structures to enable Afghanistan to meet its eventual goal of a fully sustainable state.

4. Firm predictions about Afghanistan in 2016 are difficult to make. Even in the most optimistic scenario, Afghanistan will continue to be a fragile state with some of the lowest human development indicators globally, dependent on international financial assistance and prone to outbreaks of violent conflict. The central government will need to mitigate the threats posed by the insurgency, corruption and the criminalisation of the state — in particular from drug money — and maintain security and service delivery in sparsely populated rural areas, if it is to retain credibility and popular support.

5. Afghanistan is located in a complex and unstable region. The peace process in Afghanistan should be Afghan-owned and Afghan-led, but it is clear that all regional actors have important roles to play in both facilitating and supporting a successful peace process and guaranteeing or maintaining any resulting peace agreement, which would benefit not just Afghanistan, but also the wider region. Increased regional cooperation and interdependence can play an important role in underpinning a political process by creating incentives for countries in the region to benefit from a more stable Afghanistan, in particular through promoting increased trade and commercial activities.

6. In the short term, the ongoing insurgency and the transition of responsibility for security compound a difficult political and economic situation. In the absence of an inclusive peace deal, it is likely that significant divergences in the operating environment in different areas of the country may require flexible and different approaches, from a spectrum of more stable areas continuing to develop more normalised state-building relationships to some conflict-affected areas reverting to humanitarian-led approaches. Over 600,000 people have been internally displaced due to the conflict. Neighbouring countries, especially Iran and Pakistan, continue to host large numbers of refugees from Afghanistan. Humanitarian needs among the most vulnerable segments of the Afghan population will persist for the foreseeable future. Continued progress will depend largely on the ability of the new government to: make progress in negotiating an inclusive political settlement with all major insurgent and militia groups; maintain security; tackle corruption; and enact key economic and political reforms.

7. The credibility and success of the transition depend as much on strengthening democratic and accountable governance in Afghanistan at all levels, as on the capability of the security forces. This is a long-term, generational task, but progress in the next three years can both prevent backsliding and provide an important foundation for further advances in years to come. There is a major risk that Afghanistan will face severe economic contraction if the government is unable to generate the necessary confidence to attract investment and stem capital flight as the international presence and assistance contracts reduce. In particular, there is the need to create jobs for some 400,000 Afghans entering the workforce each year. If this demand is not met, there is a risk of a new generation of underemployed and alienated youth which may lead to an increased pool for insurgent recruitment and uncontrolled and illegal immigration to neighbouring countries and Europe. Well managed legal migration can bring benefits, while further increases of uncontrolled and illegal immigration would exacerbate pressure on a number of EU Member States.

C. Objectives

8. The EU’s strategy focuses on the areas critical to achieving progress in Afghanistan up to 2016, taking account of the frameworks established by international conferences in 2011 and 2012, in particular the Tokyo Mutual Accountability Framework (TMAF), which will continue to be the basis for the relationship between the wider international community and the Government of Afghanistan for most of this period.

9. The EU will continue to champion the principles of the TMAF, aligning assistance with government priorities, cooperating closely with international partners and using the collective leverage of the EU’s diplomatic engagement and funding to support and incentivise reform. The strategy will also be a platform for implementing the Cooperation Agreement for Partnership and Development (CAPD), which will provide the legal framework for the EU’s long-term engagement, subject to the finalisation of negotiations and the draft agreement being signed by the incoming administration.

10. Achieving the overarching strategic goal leads to four objectives which focus the EU’s engagement on the areas where it can most add value and reinforce shared values between Europeans and Afghans, including democracy, rule of law and human rights. Tackling corruption, addressing the problem of narcotics and advancing women’s rights will be central to our engagement and mainstreamed across all objectives. The objectives have been drawn up to be mutually reinforcing. For example, effective civilian policing is clearly both a key component for and dependent on the existence of the rule of law and respect for human rights. Across all areas of the EU’s strategy in Afghanistan, success will depend on close cooperation with international partners and, principally, on creating Afghan ownership. The objectives will be:

a) Promoting peace, security and regional stability, by advocating an inclusive peace process, mitigating threats from drugs, trafficking and organised crime, tackling illegal migration and supporting the development of a professional and accountable civilian police service;

b) Reinforcing democracy: functioning democracy needs to be embedded through democratic oversight at national, provincial and district levels, inclusive and transparent elections, and capacity-building in key institutions of governance;

c) Encouraging economic and human development including creating a transparent economic framework to encourage investment, raise revenue, allocate finances, strengthen resilience and improve access to health and education, including for the most vulnerable segments of the population;

d) Fostering the rule of law and respect for human rights, in particular the rights of women and children, by advocating respect for human rights (including in particular the full implementation of statutory protections for the rights of women and girls), supporting greater equality before the law of all citizens and assisting with the development of a comprehensive framework to strengthen and reform the justice sector.

(a) Promoting peace, security and regional stability

11. Lasting security will require an inclusive peace process with insurgent groups, that leads to a break in ties between these groups and international terrorist groups, a significant reduction in the incidence of conflict and violence in the country, and acceptance of the Afghan constitutional framework. The EU will look to work with others in the international community to promote an Afghan-led and Afghan-owned inclusive process and, respond as opportunities allow, to support conflict resolution. Regional cooperation can play an important role in ensuring stability and neighbouring countries should play a full part in promoting peace and security. Peace, stability and security will be key to addressing growing migratory pressures and tackling organised crime and the pervasive influence of drugs and the illicit monies from their trafficking.

12. In the interim, the capability of the Afghan National Security Forces (ANSF) will be vital in containing the insurgency and laying the foundation for security. The 2012 Chicago summit set out a number of commitments from the international community to support the development of ANSF capability. This EU strategy focuses exclusively on the development and professionalisation of civilian policing, in close coordination with the Afghan authorities and international partners, building on the results from the ongoing EUPOL Afghanistan mission, substantial support provided under the EU Development Cooperation Instrument (DCI) and Member States’ activities.

13. The EU will use its engagement and instruments, as appropriate, to:

Sub-objectives

- support an inclusive Afghan-led and Afghan-owned peace and reconciliation process leading to a political settlement in which all parties eschew violence, disavow any link with terrorism, and respect human rights, in particular the rights of women;

- enhance political and economic cooperation between Afghanistan and its neighbours, supporting mutually reinforcing cooperation initiatives with neighbouring countries and international organisations;
support the regional solution strategy for the reintegration of Afghan refugees, based on principles of voluntary repatriation and sustainability;

strengthen Afghan-led efforts to increase the quality and sustainability of civilian policing, as an integral part of the justice system, leading to wider rule of law;

strengthen Afghan and regional efforts to reduce organised crime and drug production, trafficking and demand;

strengthen international cooperation to address problems caused by uncontrolled and illegal immigration, primarily to the Afghan neighbourhood, and also to Europe, and to facilitate returns to Afghanistan while respecting the 1951 Geneva Convention.

(b) Reinforcing Democracy

14. Democratic oversight and a clear separation of governmental, legislative and judicial powers are critical to the legitimacy of the state. Institutional change should be complemented by diverse and independent media, a pluralistic and active civil society, and greater participation and representation of women in all levels of public office. These steps will help ensure the strength of democratic institutions, increase the state’s accountability to the people and improve effective delivery of services to citizens.

15. The EU will use its engagement and instruments, as appropriate, to support:

Sub-objectives

- robust electoral architecture and procedures;
- credible parliamentary elections in 2015, with outcomes broadly accepted by Afghans;
- greater accountability of the executive through improved parliamentary and independent oversight;
- building the capacity of sub-national governance, focusing on reducing corruption and increasing accountability in order to improve service delivery and budget administration.

(c) Encouraging economic and human development

16. Afghanistan needs to tackle corruption to increase trust in the state and improve investor confidence. Sustained investment and the development of both the private sector and the rural economy will be critical to achieving the levels of growth needed to create jobs and increase domestic revenue. These are necessary to reduce poverty, improve livelihoods, deliver basic services, especially health and education, empower women and accelerate social and human development. Improved rural development and better health outcomes can also play a major part in reducing dependence on poppy.

17. The EU will use its engagement and instruments, as appropriate, to support the Government in achieving:

Sub-objectives
increased human development, including for the most vulnerable segments of the population, in particular in education and health;

improved public financial management;

stronger financial self-sustainability of the Afghan state, through increased revenue generation;

stimulation of the rural economy to generate more jobs and reduce dependence on poppy.

(d) Fostering the rule of law and human rights

18. Much remains to be done to safeguard progress in human rights and ensure the full implementation of statutory provisions. The development of a functioning and effective justice system will be fundamental to ensuring that the rights of Afghans, in particular Afghan women and girls, are upheld and to improving the rule of law. Effective rule of law will strengthen accountability and increase business confidence, but will require significant institutional development. The EU will use its engagement and instruments, as appropriate, to:

Sub-objectives

advance human rights, in particular the rights of women and children;

support all components of the formal justice sector in working together more effectively in a more independent, efficient, less corrupt and accessible way, better upholding the principles of the rule of law;

advocate for an end to the culture of impunity for serious war crimes and human rights abuses;

maintain the right to freedom of assembly and strengthen the right to freedom of expression, including by supporting journalists and human rights defenders.

D. Conclusion

19. Afghans themselves will be responsible for whether the transition process is a success and provides the basis for Afghanistan to move towards its goal of self-sustainability. The international community has highlighted its willingness to continue to provide exceptional levels of assistance to help Afghanistan build on progress made to date. This strategy will enable the EU and Member States to better coordinate the actions and initiatives in support of the Afghan people within the identified framework, including increased alignment with the objectives of the Government of Afghanistan, incentivising key reforms, and improved coordination with others in the international community. The strategy will provide the overarching framework for an indicative implementation plan, which will set out planned divisions of labour between EU instruments and Member States. Although the strategic goal and objectives should be robust enough to take account of most scenarios in Afghanistan, the implementation plan, and especially the pace of implementation, will be highly dependent on the security context.
